

DISABILITY PRACTICE TRAINING

Practitioner-led training designed for the people your team supports and the situations they face.

Delivered by experienced Everyday Independence practitioners, our customised training helps teams build confidence and provide safe, consistent and person-centred support.

Designed for disability support, education, employment and community teams, training can cover positive behaviour support, communication and sensory needs, relationships and inclusive practice.

Built Around Your Organisation

Training is shaped around your team, the people they support and the situations they encounter.

It combines relevant examples, practical strategies and interdisciplinary expertise.

Training Topics

Training can cover:

- ≡ positive behaviour support - understanding behaviour and supporting meaningful engagement
- ≡ responding to behaviours of concern
- ≡ disability specific modules - Autism, intellectual, physical and mental disabilities
- ≡ trauma-informed and person-centred practice
- ≡ life-stage transitions
- ≡ relationships and communication
- ≡ inclusive education and employment support.

What Your Team can Gain

Depending on your priorities, training can help your team build:

- greater confidence and disability knowledge
- practical strategies for individual support needs
- safer, more consistent support practices
- stronger person-centred and inclusive practice.

Your organisation can determine how the training contributes to its professional development requirements.

Flexible Delivery

Choose from short workshops, half-day or full-day sessions, live online training or a customised package, subject to practitioner availability.

Why Everyday Independence

For more than 25 years, Everyday Independence has worked alongside people with disability, their families and support teams to help them achieve the life they want, their way.

Our experienced practitioners bring interdisciplinary expertise and practical strategies tailored to your team and the situations they encounter.
